BRITISH DEMAND BIG EXPENSE CUT

People Would Change Billion Government Deficit to Billion Surplus.

Through a new organization, the People's Union for Economy, a demand for economy in government expenditures is going up with renewed vigor in Great Britain. According to advice received in this country from London, this organization, which has a central committee composed of prominent and influential men, has already opened its campaign. A manifesto has been issued outlining its objects.

Matter Brought to Climax.
The British chancellor of the exchequer, Austen Chamberlain, in his budget speech last April expressed the government's determination to change the billion-dollar deficit of the last fiscal year into a billion-dollar surplus in the current fiscal year. He asked for increased taxation, particularly in excess profits, while promising a reduction of governmental expenditures to make this possible. The increase in the excess profit duty was unpopular with business. But it finally went through—an increase from 40 to 60 per cent. Its effect has been to vitalize the demand for a reduction in government expenses.

In its manifesto the People's Union for Economy says:
"The necessity for drastic retrenchment in the public services is now fully realized. In 1913-1914 the total expenditure was £207,917,437 (about one billion dollars). In the present year the gross expenditure of the country is estimated at £1,232,274,000 (approximately six billion dollars); that is to say, more than six times as much as six years ago. This is a formidable figure. If a sound national life is to be reconstructed, on which enduring social reforms can be based, expenditure must be calculated on the financial capacity of the country. Moreover, excessive capital expenditure by the government tends to increase that high cost of living, which is pressing so severely upon the people."

Foreign Policy Too Costly.
"The steps by which the necessary saving can be brought about depend not only upon the more economical administration, but, to a greater extent, upon a change in the policy of the government. This change should commence forthwith if the budget for 1921 is to be brought within the financial resources of the country."

In rotation, the manifesto then details the union's position toward British foreign policies, control of industries, and toward new or recently created government ministries.
"So far as our engagements honorably permit we should aim at the reduction of our (foreign) responsibilities," the manifesto declares. The union would refuse extension of British commitments for restoration of order in Russia or in the near east. It cites the maintenance of 78,000 men in Mesopotamia at a cost, this year, of $150,000,000 as a notable example of undue increase in British obligations.
"Decontrol, or the relinquishment of all business undertakings now under government management, which can properly be carried on by private enterprise," is advocated on the ground that government control has been a source of loss.

Would Drop Ministers.
The union would also dispense with the ministry of munitions, ministry of shipping, the proposed ministry of mines and those departments of the ministries of transport and food which are not absolutely necessary.
In the matter of all expenditures it would have the nation cut its coat according to the cloth.
An illustration of the kind of spending which the union attributes to the government stationery during 1920. According to a report of the select committee of the house of commons, details of which have been forwarded by the Bankers' Trust Company's correspondent, this stationery estimate amounts to about $28,500,000, compared to approximately $6,000,000 in 1913.
Among the members of the committee which issued the manifesto for the union were: Lord Askwith, former chief industrial commissioner; Lord Chalmers, Sir Richard Cooper, M. P., and Lord Cowdrey.

ARMORED PLANES WITH CANNON TO FIGHT FUTURE SKY BATTLES

Will Take Place 2,000 Feet in Air, With Machines Going 200 Miles Per Hour, Air Service Believes.

Future air battles will be fought between metal airplanes and armored planes with multiple wings, armed with numerous machine guns and with small cannon firing heavy armor-piercing explosive balls, in the opinion of the Army air service.

These planes will have a speed up to 200 miles an hour, enormous gasoline capacity and will be capable of climbing to a 20,000-foot elevation in ten minutes, or at the rate of two miles a minute. Incidentally, all future air battles will be fought at 20,000 feet above terra firma, an elevation far above the range of human sight, the air service believes.

"It will be necessary to have very fast pursuit planes in order that swift surprise attacks may be made," says an announcement by the air service today. "Large bombardment planes will also probably carry armor about their vulnerable parts. Our armament must therefore include one or more large caliber machine guns."

"The pursuit plane of the future must be an internally braced all-metal monoplane, with a high-powered radial motor. The pilot will be placed at the trailing edge of the plane, so that he can look over or under easily. The fuselage will be short and the motor just forward of the leading edge in order that the plane will maneuver rapidly. All controls will be delicately balanced for the same reason. The cruising radius will be about seven hours and the speed well over 200 miles an hour.
"The armament will consist of four Browning synchronized machine guns, two using .30 caliber ammunition and two using .50-caliber ammunition. The pilot's cockpit must be comfortable and the aviator provided with oxygen and heating apparatus, because without doubt most of the fighting will take place above 20,000 feet. The plane will be doubly braced so that part of the bracing could be shot away and the plane still remain in the air. The gas compartments will be in the wings to be protected against fire."

SERVED TEUTONS; SUICIDE

Former Lieutenant Found Dead in Quarters Near Tampa.

TAMPA, August 26.—Henry P. Bayer, formerly a lieutenant in the German army, was found dead in the near vicinity of Tampa. The man had placed the muzzle of a shotgun in his mouth, and used a stick to push the trigger.

Bayer's officers' saber, letters and other effects confirm his story that he was in the German army for nine years.

Housewives—Here's Rest!

ON your feet all day—hurrying busily from room to room—my, how-tired and "achy" your feet are by night!

Know what causes the trouble? It's not your feet, it's the shoes you're wearing.

Scores of housewives come to us with the same complaint. We, suggest they try Educator Shoes.

The best proof that Educators satisfy is that the same women come back and ask for another pair of Educators.

Here's the reason: The Educator is shaped to fit feet naturally, with plenty of room to "let the feet grow as they should"—free from corns, bunions, callouses, and ingrowing nails.

They're neat and good-looking, too, not freakish. Let us fit your feet with a pair of Educators. You'll decide then to get them for the whole family.

BOYS TO JUDGE CATTLE FOR PRIZES AT FAIR

Maryland Lads Will Compete for Honors Planned by State University Special Service.

Seventeen teams, representing as many counties in Maryland, will compete for prizes offered by the University of Maryland extension service in the judging-cattle contest to be held at the Timonium fair, in Timonium, Baltimore county, August 31 to September 6, inclusive. There will be five team prizes, twenty individual prizes and four sweepstake prizes. For several years county agents have been busy selecting and coaching the three boys who will represent their respective counties in the contest.

Only boys between the ages of twelve and eighteen who are sons of actual farmers will be admitted to the competition, and they will be called on to judge four types of dairy cattle. The team prize of $100 will go to the team scoring best in the four breeds. Individual prizes will be awarded boys making the best showing in a particular breed.

Interest also is being shown in the pure-bred pig contest. Boys from nineteen counties will be represented by their pigs in this contest, and Harford county alone expects to send forty young porkers to compete for pure-bred honors. The four breeds eligible for prizes are the Duroc, Jerseys, Berkshires, Poland Chinas and Chester Whites.

The other features which will come under supervision of the University of Maryland extension service will include a dairy exhibit, showing the amount of feed a cow consumes in a year and her product in milk, and a feeding demonstration with six cows, showing daily production and food consumption.

Tuberculosis-control work will be explained and its effect on the animal will be shown by a diseased carcass, which will be kept on ice in a glass case for inspection.
The horticultural exhibit will include an orchard of fifteen trees, which will be used to demonstrate the proper methods of pruning.
Girl Club work in the state will be represented by an exhibit, and children's diets and school lunches will be subjects for interesting demonstrations. A clothing exhibit and a demonstration of milk dishes also will prove of interest to the women.

Farm crops, soil fertility, poultry, rural transportation, marketing and wool grading will be other subjects covered by exhibits and demonstrations.

TAXIS AID BAGGAGE STRIKE.

NEW YORK, August 26.—Police and detectives carried on a still hunt today for taxicab drivers who in sympathy with striking baggage transfer men, were said to be refusing to transport baggage. Several licenses were revoked because the drivers refused baggage, in defiance of a city ordinance requiring them to transport it. Detectives also arrested several strikers, and charged them with dumping trucks from independent trucks, which were attempting deliveries.
